National Grid Mid W Connection

April 2011

Dear Sirs,

Should the power lines come through the Meifod valley they will, inevitably, march straight over the top of the ancient site of Mathrafal. This is the ancient home of the Princes of Powys and as such one of the most treasured historical sites in Wales. As such it was picked by the National Eisteddfod in 2004 where a veritable town of marquees and tents was erected upon its acres.

I very strongly object to such a site being desecrated. Were this England, would the National Grid be allowed to over-stride Stone Henge? Do not, for one moment, think that Mathrafal is not of equal historic importance because it is.

Yours faithfully
